

Abstract

A method of securely supporting password change is disclosed. The method comprises the steps of: detecting an occurrence of a password change operation in execution on a system and receiving a new password by the system; detecting the new password when provided; storing data indicative of the new password in a database other than the password database of the system for later retrieval, the data indicative of the new password for provision to the system.